GENERAL DYNAMICS
Information Technology

March 14, 2008

To Whom it May Concern;

General Dynamics Information Technology, Inc. has in place a program that pre-qualifies various companies to become providers-of-choice (to General Dynamics Information Technology, Inc.) in specific technical capability areas. This program is called the Quality Service Provider (QSP) Program and initial membership is attained through formal source selection procedures. Thereafter, these companies receive formal performance evaluations on a continuous basis to ensure that the quality of their work, along with being a cooperative and valued team player remains at a high, professional level.

HP Communications, Inc. is a member of the 2008 General Dynamics Information Technology Quality Service Provider Program. This letter does not obligate any other General Dynamics organization to utilize this company. It only acts as an introduction so that you may be assured that General Dynamics has an ongoing relationship with this firm and they come highly recommended in the areas of Inside Plant/Premise wiring and Outside Plant Installations.

If you have any questions concerning the QSP Program please contact the undersigned at 781 455-5235.

Sincerely,

Thomas J. Leiby

QSP Program Manager
